Course Overview:

A formalized document locks an individual into a position that it is most difficult to retract from. The statement is a valuable part of any evidence that is collected and is the base of evidence introduced in a court proceeding.

It is most important that any interview is well documented with a written statement. Your staff could be expending resources in an investigation that doesn't produce results. With knowledge obtained from this course, participants will produce concise, detailed statements to allow for well-defined decisions.

What you will learn....

- Types of statements formats
- Handwritten, typed or recorded
- Making sure the: who, what, when, where and why are covered.
- Signature and error correction
- Protection of a statement
- Witnessing the written statement

"A valuable part of any investigation is a well conceived written statement that details the subject's confession, knowledge of incident or alibi"
